

Shop Offers Free Dresses To Military Brides

Reading Bridal Shop Thanks Vets, Families

READING, Ohio --

A bridal shop in Reading is helping military brides have the weddings of their dreams.

"I am very excited for the wedding, but we can't set a date yet," said bride-to-be Michelle Rosmarin. "Being in the military you can't; everything's too up in the air."

She's waiting until her fiancé returns from a 7-month tour in Afghanistan to set a date, but she's picking out a free wedding dress as a military bride at European Bridal.

Emily Falk's fiancé just got back from an overseas tour, and she's picking out her free dress, too.

"I feel very blessed because I always look up to my fiancé," Falk said. "He's the hero, and I always want to do things for him."

The bridal shop makes the offer to thank military members and their families for their service and sacrifice.

"It's something we like to do," said JoAnn Tomasulo, of European Bride. "We feel like we're doing something for the military, and it gives us a really good feeling inside."
